More and more companies are taking a blended approach to training and education – one that combines conferencing technologies with classroom learning. This approach leverages the best of face-to-face and distance learning, enabling you to provide wider access to more educational services.

With the right conferencing partner, you can increase the educational activities you offer while reducing costs and making more effective use of your customers’ and employees’ time.

Supporting continuous learning through conferencing

Many training and education professionals are doing more by combining audio and web conferencing, which requires no special equipment – all you need is a telephone and a computer. Whether you’re hosting a “Webinar” or providing remote access to a live broadcast, you can use powerful conferencing features to help you create a learning environment without boundaries. We offer a unique combination of audio, web and videoconferencing services that provide you with the maximum in flexibility and control.

Conferencing can help you provide greater access to important training and career advancement opportunities – more often and in a more cost effective manner. By reducing the amount of time that students are required to spend out of the office or traveling to a classroom site, you can give your customers and employees the flexibility to participate in coursework wherever they are, whenever it is convenient for them. Just another way that ConferencePlus can help simplify your business day.
